

ert Motherwell, Beaumont and Nancy Newhall, Aaron Siskind, Harry Callahan, Stefan Wolpe, Franz Kline, Jack Tworckov, Leo Amino, Edgar Taschdjian.

The fee for the summer term, which is open to approximately seventy-five students, is $400. Application for a scholarship is made on the same basis as for other semesters. Details of the program for the summer session 1953 will be announced in February.

ADVISORY SYSTEM

Each student, upon entering the College, is assigned by the Registrar to a member of the regular Faculty who acts as that student's advisor. At any time thereafter the student may select a new advisor from among the Faculty by getting the consent of the person he wishes to select and making the necessary arrangements with the Registrar.

Working together, the advisor and student assume the responsibility for seeking the best path for the maximum development of the student. In addition to his general function of being available to council the advisee on any and all matters, the advisor has the following specific responsibilities: to guide the student in preparing for the qualifying examinations and to advise him in deciding when he is prepared to take them; to see that necessary arrangements for taking the qualifying examinations are made; to advise the student in preparing his Plan of Study and in carrying out that Plan; to advise the student in deciding when he is ready to take the final examinations and to ask to be graduated; to see that all the necessary arrangements for the final examinations are made; to select the outside examiner and to obtain from the Faculty approval of that selection; to make all necessary arrangements with the outside examiner; to present to the Faculty for its action the student's request that he be graduated, reading at that time the report of the outside examiner and making his own recommendations.

If, for any reason, the faculty member becomes unable to continue functioning in his advisory capacity, it is the joint responsibility of advisor and advisee to make other arrangements in consultation with the Registrar and all other persons who may be involved.

LIBRARY

The College library, housed in a one-story frame building overlooking the lake, contains about 12,000 volumes, cataloged according to the Library of Congress system. There are about another 5,000 volumes in faculty members' collections. The library subscribes to thirty newspapers and periodicals.

A regular annual appropriation for the purchase of recent publications assures steady and coordinated growth. Direct purchases are almost all made to meet the specific needs of individual courses.